

DENNIS F. DONOVAN

Born: April 9, 1889, in Champion, Michigan
Died: September 16, 1974, in Rochester, Minnesota

(ca. 1940s)

DENNIS FRANCIS DONOVAN served on the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota from July 1945, to December 31, 1965, when he assumed senior status.

After receiving an LL.B. from the University of Michigan Law School in 1913, Donovan was in private practice in Duluth from 1914 to 1945. On June 1, 1945, he was nominated by President Harry S Truman to a seat on the federal district court made vacant by the death of George F. Sullivan on April 14, 1944. He was confirmed by the Senate on July 17, 1945, and received his commission the next day.

An official history of the United States District Court for the District of Minnesota published in 1989 included this sketch:

Dennis F. Donovan was appointed by President Truman in 1945 to fill the vacancy left by Judge Sullivan when he died a year earlier. Judge Donovan almost did not get the position, however, for President Roosevelt apparently had chosen another candidate. But Roosevelt died [on April 12, 1945] after the vacancy opened in 1944, leaving President Truman free to choose his own nominee, Judge Donovan.

Judge Donovan was born in Ironwood, Michigan. Like two other District of Minnesota federal judges, he graduated from the University of Michigan Law School. Judge Donovan moved to Duluth in 1913. He eventually practiced for the Oliver Iron Mining Company.

After his appointment to the federal bench, Judge Donovan was stationed in Duluth, but sat frequently in St. Paul. He served on the federal bench until he retired in 1965.¹
